

ABSTRACT

A system and method for suspending and resuming transmission of data streams without creating significant additional overhead is described. The transmission of information is governed by a priority sorting mechanism that keeps track of data stream transmission order, thereby allowing for suspension and resumption of data stream transmission without the creation of significant additional overhead.

5